Establishing a Position

DRIME MINISTER MACMILLAN said the other day that he was hopeful that we shall get an agreed Western position" on the Berlin crisis. This week President Kennedy was trying to get an agreed position with the government of West Ger-many, lacking which there can be no real position at all.

In every attempt by Britain and the United States to resume negotia-tions with Russia on Berlin there have been two stumbling blocks. President de Gaulle of France seems to oppose any negotiations, at least on any terms that Russia would consider. Even if he changes his mind, rather than risk isolation among his allies, there remains the West German problem, personified by that granitic symbol, Chancellor

There is high irony, to be sure, in the spectacle of a West German government laying down terms to Britain and the United States when the whole Berlin stalemate, the division of Europe and the central crisis of the world were produced by Germany in the first place; especially when West Germany's prosperity and power today were built mainly by the United States through the Marshall Plan.

In grappling with the German chancellor Mr. Kennedy must wryly remember these things but he can-not let them stand in the way of his efforts to save the peace.

his efforts to save the peace.

West Germany is an essential bastion of NATO, geographically, militarily and economically. If possible, any American policy of negotiating with Russia must carry the support of the newly-erected West support of the newly-erected West German government—that is to say, the judgment of Dr. Adenauer who, in turn, must carry the judgment of his voters in an exceedingly difficult situation of domestic politics.
The theory that West Germany, digusted by American in Berlin, might decide to throw in its lot with Russia no doubt is much exaggerated. No free peo-ple fear Russian Communism so much as the West Germans who have experienced it at first hand and now see it, a few yards off, over the Berlin Wall.

Nevertheless, the historic pull eastward still exists below the surface. In resisting it, Mr. Kennedy was bound to seek an accommodation with the West German leader as been erecting his own kind of wall by demanding terms of nego-tiation with Russia which are obviously impractical.

To begin with, it is impossible to re-unify the two Germanys in the visible future, their division being a grim fact of power which cannot be altered short of nuclear war, the destruction of all Germany and the rest of the world as well. It would be impossible also to make the prior removal of the Berlin Wall a condi-tion for any negotiation, if negotiation is to have any prospect of suc-cess. The chance to eliminate the Wall was lost when the United States would not risk its destruction on the day of its appearance. Conceivably Russia would remove this ultimate assertion of its power in central Europe as part of a larger bargain but would not abandon it merely to get negotiations under

Yet before coming to Washington Dr. Adenauer insisted on both those basic terms—the objective of

of the Wall.

Clearly President Kennedy was trying this week to modify the chancellor's rigid position and he has succeeded in at least one respect. Dr. Adenauer has agreed that removal of the Wall shall not be a required preliminary to negotiation with the Russians, although it must accompany any eventual settlement.

The final communique from the

The final communique from the talks reports the leaders "in accord on the basic elements" which will permit a negotiated Berlin settlement, although fuller details are not given. Further discussions must be held with President de Gaulle and Mr. Macmillan before an agreed Allied stand can be announced. But known publicly and explicitly. As coalition was being formed in West there does seem to have been some coalition was being formed in West Germany, the German Ambassador in Mosporers at Washington. progress at Washington.

coalition was being formed in West German, It is time for patience in the Western alliance, the sort of patience and unruffled calm which Mr. Kennedy has lately shown in abundance. For there is no use expecting negotiations with Russia, even if Russia seriously intends to negotiate, until the Western powers can agree on their own terms.

In a recent excellent speech Mr. Diefenbaker said that "in Berlin, as in the fields of disarmament and nuclear testing, the West stands ready and has long stood ready to enter into realistic and constructive talks immediately."

The Prime Minister's motives in these problems are of the lighest but his statement is too optimistic, for the moment anyway. The West will not be ready to bargain until the obstacles in Paris and Bonn.

IN GRANTING AN EXCLUSIVE interview to a Soviet journalist, President Kennedy is trying, in a heretofore unused way, to penetrate the Iron Curtain and reach the

The interviewer is not merely the editor of a Soviet newspaper. Since the journal is Izvestia, the official Soviet government paper, he is also the mouthpiece for the Soviet regime. In addition he is Premier Khrushchev's son-in-law, and a recently appointed member of the powerful Communist Party central committee.

Wearing all these hats, Mr. Alexei Adzhubei could provide a very important reportorial link between the United States President and his hoped-for audience. Russian policy varies on pronouncements by

We may be sure that Mr. Kennedy will try to describe in clear detail his stand on various controversial subjects and DENNIS THE MEN his hope of achieving a peaceful understanding with Russia. How accurately and fully these remarks accurately and fully these remarks and hopes are conveyed to the Soviet public may well provide a measure of Russia's real intent in the field of peaceful coexistence. What Mr. Kennedy has to say will undoubtedly be good news to the Russian people. It is to be hoped that they will receive the message.

The Fall of the Infallible

THESE ELECTRIC BRAINS aren't so smart. From Australia comes the report that an electronic computer fouled up the number of socks United States troops were entitled to receive. The soldiers were given too many.

The Australian League Against Electronic Computers, according to the report, is decently happy over the report, is decently happy over this mistake by the computers. And it points out that an electric com-puter never tells on itself. The in-formation on the mistake was revealed by "some busybody at headquarters."

It is shattering, of course, to nd the mechanically infallible find the mechanically infallible making mistakes. But this is only part of our disillusionment. The other part concerns the lack of imagination in electronic computers. Sure the machines gave out too many socks. But why wasn't it smart enough to say the extra issue was for Christmas—that it was just ensuring a fine tradition by pro-viding surplus socks for the soldiers to hang up by the fireplace for Santa to fill?

There is little doubt, it seems to me, that the purely Western policy of Dr. Adenauer is going to give way to a more Bismarckian policy. The problem for the West is how its ties with West Germany can be maintained against an abnormal Inviting Sneak Attack and dangerous pull towards the East. Reunification, the rectification of the Reunification, the rectification of the eastern frontiers, the opening of vast announcements on Tocsin "B" the other markets in Russia and in China, will exert a strong pull on German policy.

As we sat listening to the radio announcements on Tocsin "B" the other weening, we could not help thinking exert a strong pull on German policy.

While it is most important to recognize and understand this problem, the wrong way to deal with it, I am sure, would be to force the Germans to choose between their role in the Western community and an accommodation with Eastern Europe and Russia.

Bunting Covered Bitterness

By PATRICK O'DONOVAN, from Acera, Ghana

THERE is a tragedy implicit in the royal tour of Ghana. It is a tragedy of lost opportunities and of old quarrels made more intense. The Ghanaian gov ernment, officials and press were de-lighted with the tour, but are danger-ously hurt and angry with what has on the surface this was the most brilliant of postwar royal tours. Ghana was flattered by the visit, and is legitimately proud of the way it was organized and handled.

The crowds were the largest in Ghanalan history. They were excited and affectionate, and they would pay such honor to no one else in the world. The Queen magnificently conducted The Queen magnificently conducted herself and President Nkrumah was both courtly and protective.

A tour and a triumph of this sort could have done immeasurable good. For there is the fact that over foreign policy there is a serious rift between Britain and Ghana.

There has been a brawl, a damaging and ugly one, and it is impossible to say now who started it. The result is that the tour has been all but drained of political significance.

The Queen made references to the Commonwealth ideal; President Nkrumah studiously avoided that sort of thing and, despite the Commonwealth theme in the lavish decorations of Accra;

he allowed himself no serious reference to either the Commonwealth or Britain. The tour became a personal tribute to the Royal Family. It is being allowed here no wider significance, and that was not the original intention.

But, of course, free and serious criticism cannot be stopped merely as an act of courtesy or policy. The essential British criticism has been of the authoritarian tendencies of this government.

We should all realize that it is nature's most nearly perfect—until weaning time; breast milk for bables, cow's milk for calves.

The varying composition between these two, to meet the needs of the different rates of development between bables and calves, makes a problem in adapting cow's milk for infant feeding. Even when the percentage composition is made supposedly id-ntical, the vitamin and mineral content cannot be approximated to breast milk.

Having spent a lifetime working with bables and children as a trained worker; a year of that time in a Mothercraft Hospital, which dealt only with feeding and digestive problems up to one year of age, I feel qualified to speak on this subject. All bables (from weaning age) and children in my care are given milk only at the end of a meal, never to wash down food during the meal, Their main liquid intake is water on rising, and water or fruit juice at the

It will be a blessing in disguise if the present deplorable scare of "fall-out" leads more mothers to undertake their God-given responsibility, and give babies their natural birthright—breast milk.

Each political party is wooing the Frenchspeaking vote with promises and concessions designed to turn Quebec's dissatisfaction to its own political advantage.

Justice Minister Fulton, a French-speaking English Roman Catholic, announced in a speech at Quebec City that the government will have Parliament pass a law to 'enshrine' Quebec's rights of religion, language and law. This French-Canadian bill of rights will not add anything to the rights guaranteed the people of Quebec by the Treaty of Paris in 1763 and by the British North America Act, but it will declare that these rights may not be diminished or abrogated by law without the concurrence of the Quebec legiswithout the concurrence of the Quebec legis-lature and government.

Legally this proposed law is as phoney as a $3 bill. Anything that Parliament can enact, Parliament can repeal. Perhaps its only value will be to remind English-Cana-dians, and reassure French-Canadians, that the rights of religion, language and civil law granted to Quebeckers as an act of grace in 1763 and confirmed in the act of Confederation are still valid, and a charge upon the conscience of the Canadian people. Liberal leader Pearson has announced that if he is elected prime minister he will proceed with two projects close to French-Canada's heart: the selection of a distinctive Canadian flag and designation of "O Canada," written by a son of Quebec, as the national extension of the control of the contro

Pearson also champions long-standing and authority in Ottawa, and promises to give the provinces exclusive jurisdiction in fields in which the provincial interest is pre-dominant—health, welfare and labor—along with a larger share of tax revenues to enable the provinces to satisfy public demand in these areas of government.

These are more meaningful for Quebec, and they are promises that in principle are not likely to offend English-Canadians.

The New Democratic party's action in culling the word "national" from its constitution is a concession to Quebec. It implies recognition of a French-Canadian contention that Canada is a union of two nations, French Canada and British North America. Outside Quebec the New Democrate profess their action simply reamerica. Outside deceded in a considerate profess that their action simply reflects the fact that the word "national" has a different meaning in French than it has in English. But inside Quebec—that's a different matter.

Quebec extremists regard these offers as opened extremists regard these offects as sops. They are alarmed that heavy immigration is defeating their long-anticipated "victory of the cradle." Ironically, in light of the new national attitude about U.S. capital, they are resentful that most of the productive capital in Quebec is owned by non-French-Canadians. And they resent the fact that Canada is not wholly bilingual.

No party could meet their demands and stay in business nationally. But fortunately most Quebeckers realize that the Balkanization of Canada is not the best remedy for the shortcomings of Confederation.

Big Ears for Small Talk

WASHINGTON (UPI) - There is a recognized scientific phenomenon known as

—I'm not kidding about this—"the cocktail party effect."

I saw it demonstrated I saw it gemonstrated the other day under exact laboratory conditions— that is, at a cocktail party. Let me see if I can explain it.

explain it.

Suppose some gabby dame corners you at the hors d'oeuvres table. You can hear her talking even though you are surrounded by a lot of other neise, such as the tinkling of ice cubes, the splash of spilled drinks and the crunching of peanuts.

This ability to locate and orientate the direction of certain sounds from amid general group noises is, in essence, the cock-

Do you follow me thus far? Very well.

Now comes the hard part.

An outfit called United Research Inc., has been studying the functions of external ears and it has found that our head flaps do much more than keep our sunglasses from falling off. If we lost these shell-like appendages, sounds would enter the inner ears from all directions and we would have trouble calizing them.

Under such conditions, as you can s a cocktail party would become unbearable, rather than merely boring. By DICK WEST

United research claims its experiments have produced "a true break-through in the understanding of the hearing pheno So it threw a coctail party here to demonstrate and celebrate. Each guest was provided with a pair of earphones through which he could listen to a tepe recording of something called "binaural" sound. It was like no recording I ever heard before.

Normally, a recording is made by placing microphones about the studio. In this instance, however, United Research built a dummy human head and placed the microphones inside its ears.

What we heard over the earphones, then, was music as it might have sounded had we been in the recording studio. It had a directional as well as a tonal quality. Thus, when the musicians moved about the studio, this could be detected in the recording. At times, the music sounded as if it came from behind us; at other times, from above or in front.

As the recording was being made, some-one rattled castanets directly over the dummy's head. As I listened over the ear-phones, it sounded exactly as if they were being rattled over my head.

United Research officials claim that application of the cocktail party effect will make possible vast improvements in the reproduction of sound. Possibly so. I wish someone would discover a way to improve

'Y' Officials Won't Budge From Precinct

A delegation of YM-YWCA officials Wednesday told a city zoning committee the proposed location of a new joint "Y" building in the heart of the civic precinct could not be changed.

Some objections had bee voiced in city council against location of a "Y" building in the precinct, particularly if it included dormitories.

Dr. A. F. McGill, chairman of the development committee of the development committee, told this morning's meeting that it was not possible to shift the proposed site out of the precinct, and added that present plans required a 40bedroom area for YWCA put

However, he said the "Y" would be willing to operate a recreational centre for senior citizens as proposed by the city's centennial committee.

He said such a centre could be built alongside the new "Y" building with senior citizens using the large auditor ium and some craft facilities in the main building during daytime periods.

UNITED GETS FORWARD FROM KICKERS' SQUAD

Victoria United has signed another forward to help its cause in the stretch run for the firsthaif championship of the Pacific Coast Soccer League

Manager Wally Milligan said Wednesday Henry Vanderhorst has agreed to transfer to United from Hourigan's Kickers of the District League. Although Vanderhorst can play any for-ward position, Milligan expects to use him ex-clusively at outside right.

Because of the league's seven-day waiting period after a signing, Vanderhorst will not be able to play in Saturday's game against Vancouver Firefighters at Royal Athletic Park. United heads into Saturday's game trailing league-leading Columbus by only one point.

One thing about it this time, there's no doubt the West's top club is moving on the Grey Cup final.

Last year, you'll recall, Edmonton Eskimos knocked off Winnipeg Blue Bombers in a hard-hitting final and advanced into the national classic against Ottawa Rough Riders. We lost and immediately the cry went up that the East's best team had merely beaten the West's second-best.

I don't agree, of course.

I don't agree, of course. But this year there can be no argument—and the mighty Blues proved it again Wednesday night.

They did just about everything a club could and literally wiped the floor, or turf, with the Red Raiders from Calgary. From the outset the Big Blue rendered Stampeders to an in ept collection of bodies, leav ing the impression they coul score any time they wanted And, come to think of it, they did score from almost everywhere in the field in one of the most lopsided routs in recent Western Conference Football history.

EVERYTHING WORKED

To pick out any one play that befuddled Stampeders would be wasting words. For everything Winnipeg tried worked beautifully and they marched up and down the field with alarming authority.

Leo Lewis, of course, got them off on the right foot in the young moments and set the tune. The rest of the noise makers took it up and the issue was never in doubt after 10 minutes were history.

Going into the game, I fully expected Biue Bombers to win, but I still thought Stamps capable of at least one more "big" effort. It was not to be, nowever, and they were a sadly defeated outfit.

Winnipeg's offence and defence componemented as a chapter of the force of the componemented as a chapter of the strong o

There is still a surprising number of hunters who either belong to the knot-headed "it can't happen to me school" or just can't learn from experiences of others. People still persist in playing a version of Russian roulette and packing loaded firearms in cars.

Despite reports about U.S. hunters shooting themselves and friends inside cars and publicity given to previous convictions around these parts, the commonest infraction of game laws on Vancouver Island is still carrying loaded firearms in motor vehicles.

And it is no different in other sections of the province. Of 139 charges laid up to the end of October, at the Cache Creek checking station, near Clinton, 74 were for packing loaded guns in cars, compared to just 65 for all other types of errors or evasions.

The others were: Removing all evidence of sex from game animals (21), game shot out of season (17), untagged game (9), no licences (7), removing all plumage from game birds (3), unplugged shotguns (2), pitlamping (2), and miscellaneous infractions (9).

It is difficult to believe so many could forget to unload guns or disregard a law that is enforced strictly in the interests of safety. Makes a guy wonder how many make it a habit and unload before reaching a check point and, especially, how many would practice the murderous habit especially, how many would practice the murderous habit it it was not illegal.

Take Second Look Before Shooting

Salety precautions in the bush becomes doubly important in the southern portion of the Island and on Salt Spring this weekend, when antierless deer become, legal targets. Although it may not be necessary to identify a deer as a buck, it is necessary to identify it positively as a deer. The woods will be loaded with hunters over the weekend. Take a great look then look again before. the weekend. Take a good look, then look again before shooting.

In Vancouver Island areas north of the San Juan and In Vancouver Island areas north of the San Juan and Koksilah Rivers, antlerless deer came into season Nov. 11 and hunters generally had fairly good success. Over opening weekend, conservation officiers checked 1,580 hunters, who had bagged 358 deer for a success average of 22.65 per cent. As in former seasons, a good number of sportsmen still prefer to shoot only bucks and of the 294 mature deer checked last weekend, 164 were bucks.

Most productive section was around Copper Canyon, the only place checked where more does than bucks were bagged. One-third of 225 hunters killed deer, bringing back 24 bucks, 37 does and 14 fawns.

At Northwest Bay, the success ratio was 25.26 as 384 riflemen downed 42 bucks, 32 does and 24 fawns. In the Wolf Lake-Oyster River area it was 16.23 per cent—31 bucks, 16 does, three fawns for 308 hunters, who took 56 bucks, 34 does, 21 fawns for a 20.63 average. At Franklin River it was 19.20 as 125 gunners collected 11 bucks, 11 does and two fawns.

Winter springs still seem to be few and far between, but salt-water anglers chasing grilse have been finding brisk action. Good grilse catches have been common in the past two weeks off Victoria, in Saanleh Inlet and around Crofton with bucktail flys producing well in the inlet and at Crofton.

Among anglers who have taken recent grilse limits near Goldstream are R. J. Caldwell, Bob Caldwell, Nick Lapshinoff, W. Allan, Bill Barr, Alec Hill, Mrs. Wyn Rusk, Mrs. Cathle Williams, Art Mawer and G. Evans. * * *

A total of 50,450 trout fingerlings have been planted this month in 14 Vancouver Island lakes. Among the lakes stocked were Durrance (2,800 fingerlings), Glen (3,120), Lizard (1,885), Fuller's (3,480) and Weston (4,440.)

Methods of pitlamping deer have undergone a big change in recent years. The swing is to a hit-and-run operation.

In the old days, pitlampers prowled fields and trails with lamps attached to heatigear. Deer gunned down usually had to be field dressed, then packed to car or house. The modern pitlamper cruises back roads in a station wagon or pickup, in which a tarpaulin is already laid out. If a deer is not a clear enough target in headlights, big fiashlights do the trick. Once shot, the deer is immediately tossed onto the tarp, covered up and whisked to a house to be safely dressed and skinned.

However, conservation officers are also modernized

COLUMBIA HEARINGS END-DECISION FAR OFF

Final Plea for Arrow Lake Victims

Public hearings on the Columbia River power project wound up here Wednesday with an impassioned plea from an MLA on behalf of people who will be flooded out and a promise that every part of the project will be economically justified.

The plea came from Kaslo-Slocan New Dam, Mr. Paget told Slocan New Democratic Party MLA Randolph Harding who represents part of the area to be flooded by the Arrow Lakes dam on the Columbia.

Unique Method

A fully-equipped laboratory can provide information unique in character, obtain-able by no other technique.

The nearest similar equip ment in this country is at the University of Saskatchewan.

Decision of the club was made on the recommendation of its centennial committee and executive after consulta-tion with Prof. Lewis J. Clark, head of the college chemistry department, and other college officials.

Work of setting up the lab-oratory site and ancillary equipment in a Gordon Head ampus army hut will begin nmediately, said Prof. Clark.

2-Year Gap Filled

This location would serve for two years, until completion of the college's new $2,000,000 science slated for the fall of 1963.

Exciting New Perfumes Here From Sunny Spain By PENNY SAVER Sister. Dear: Do you remember when we used to borrow Mun's parry foresses, high heels and pieces of lace and strut around pretending we were the most plannorous of glamorous seportura? I couldn't help thinking of those days when I suffide some of the exotic cologne that's recently come from Spain, it took me back to the "lefts preteind rea quicker than any guided lift on leten I d love to discover than a hint to lars of soap. The family will have trouble getting ne out of the barbroom once I have this soap to bathe in! Knowing your taste for the more subtle fragrances there's another Spanish import that features P's ounces of cologne at 250 and two-ounce bottle of perfume spary mist, selling for 33. This one is particularly delicate—I'm sure you'd love it I think I've found just the thing to get our young inp of a nephew "ready and willing" when it's bash time. This is a bath toy soap quarter that has four. To round off the quarter there's two cuddity yellow ducks. You've guessed It—they answer to the name of Duckey! Tellike you to have a look at them. You can see them on sale for $1.20 in torse I was in this morning. Until I hear from you, hasta la vista, querida. Penny, EY 23131.

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—UN delegates expect the Security Council to quietly drop the Cuban charge that the United States threatens to invade the Dominican Republic.

The council scheduled another session Friday to hear the views of the Dominican government in full. It was expected after that to consider the full. It was expected after that to consider the case closed despite efforts by Cuba and the Soviet Union to blow it up into a major issue.

Cuban Ambassador Mario Garcia-Inchaustegui called on the council to condemn the U.S. as an aggressor and order it to withdraw the ships and planes it stationed off the Dominican capital when two brothers of the late dictator, Generalissimo Rafael-Trujillo, threatened a coup.

Informants said, however, that no council member—not even Russia—was willing to sponsor such a demand. Cuba is not a member of the council.

assured me that all was well but that we must return to our harbor.

We reached the partial shelter of our bay but the wind was still strong and gusty. We had to tack as before, short tacks, cliffs on one side and reefs on the other. Once while approaching the cliff when shifting squalls made it difficult to go about, the cliff seemed to be rushing towards us, menacingly, and to my dim vision a crash seemed imminent on the foaming rocks at account of the recent cruise which she has accepted as her last.

By Elleen Blanchet

There are brilliant October days that tempt one to make one last trip to the summer cottage, to take one last swim in the sea, or one last sail while the sea is still friendly.

I had recently lost most of my sight, which restricted me from walking by myself, so I had been looking forward to the day when I could again enjoy the delight of sailing in our little sloop, the Ptarmigan. our little sloop, the Ptarmigan.
No problems of traffic, no effort as she carried us over the gentle rise and fall of the waves with the song of the wind in the rigging, luxurious ease—or so I thought.

Trouble Comes Early
I had trouble when I lost the rubber tip of my white cane between the widely spaced planks of the float, which made it difficult for me to feel my way among the paint pots, coils of rope' and other miscellaneous gear sailors leave about while they are putting their boats up for the winter.

There was more trouble when the incoming tide and a strong wind forced our dinghy sideways across our exit, but we finally fended it off and were free to set down the narrow channel which led to the open bay.

Then, engine off, sails hoisted, the little Ptarmigan, light and alive, skimmed over the waves . . a delightful feeling. The strong wind was not in our favor. We had to tack but there was a delicious sense of buoyancy for a long time until we reached the open time until we reached the open time to the open bay.

sense of buoyancy for a long time until we reached the open sea in the Strait of Georgia.

It was quite different there. The tempestuous wind had whipped up a heavy sea, and the water was a deep, dark blue, edged with white caps to the horizon. The nearer waves rushed and leaped at each other, crashing their angry heads together, breaking in a

We were racing ahead, scuppers under, sails straining; when heavy squalls from different quarters would hit us, sails would slat and shudder, and the heavy boom would slash over our heads.

There something happened to the jib sheet. My husband shouted that he must go forward to clear it and handed me the tiller. I watched him make his way along the narrow deck outside the cabin to the limit of my fractional sight, then the mainsail blotted out everything.

In my imagination the whole conducted by Rev. A. I. Hig-sea was peopled with ships gins. Burial will be in Hatley with which we might collide Memorial Gardens.

Final Effort

I was terrified until the skipper, catching a favorable slant of the wind, threw the sloop over on the other tack, away from the cliff which had seemed to be hanging over us, and we reached the narrow passage leading to our slip. Sails were lowered and the engine started. As we approached our wharf, it had to be put into reverse but it lacked power to check our speed against the strong wind. My husband had to leap to the float with the bow rope and exert all his strength to ease her into her berth. We made fast and secured sails and gear and reset can—

Looking like a monstrous ear trumpet or Victrola, the city's last 125 decibel Civil Defence warning siren to be mounted in the current installation program is eased off truck by Brian Andrew, 1207 Pearce Crescent. Line crew erected the rotating siren on a steel platform, shown at right looming just over rooftop level, at the rear of St. Patrick's Church in the 2000 block Carrick, Oak Bay. An army spokesman said this model of five horse-power type has improved efficiency over 10 h.p. sirens originally intended. (Times photo.)

OTTAWA (CP) Sales of the new Canada savings bonds have brought $888,000,000 into the federal treasury, Finance Minister Fleming has an annunced. This is a 13-per-cent increase from $786,000,000 during the corresponding period last year's sales campaign.

Mr. Fleming's statement said it is obvious the campaign has been successful in every respect.

Final sales totals, to be known some time in December, were expected to show a further increase.

Savings bond sales under the example of the sales totals and the industrial market activity was restricted and the leaders in most sections receded. In electric equipments, however, English Electric ralled after yesterday's sharp tall. Gold shares were mainly depressed but there were isolated firm spots. Coppers improved and tins were often higher.

Dollar stocks moved irregularly and within narrow limits. Oil shares failed to hold initial gains and were lower on balance.

AT VANCOUVER trading was moderately active with Savings bond sales under the payroll savings plan total a record $221,000,000 topping the 1959 record of $219,000,000 and an increase of $5,000,000 from last year.

Robert Baird 8th to Seek Council Seat

Robert Baird, 55-year-old investment counsellor, Wednes-day became the eighth person to declare himself in the race for four aldermanic seats.

He said he would campaign for election Dec. 14 largely on a platform calling for construcion of a new city hall building.

R. B. Hilton, an attendant at Colquitz mental hospital, announced he would run for the Sanich vacancy on Greater Victoria School Board, assuring an election for that position because the retiring interpretable of the same of the cumbent, Mrs. A. B. Thomps will stand for re-election.

Another trustee whose term expires next month, David Logan, representing the city on the board, said he would seek re-election.

Export Issue Raises Storm

By TOM GOULD Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The federal government has demanded an explanation from the United States of statements involving the Columbia River controversy alleged to have been made by a member of the U.S. cabinet.

U.S. Ambassador Livingston

Merchant has been told to meet with Justice Minister Davie Fulton later today to explain the remarks, attributed to Interior Secretary Stuart Udall. Ottawa considers the re-marks to have constituted an invasion into a domestic politi-cal conflict. This was the latest development in the suddenly re-ignited Columbia River battle between

B.C. and Ottawa. DECISIVE PERIOD

Officials here now believe the events of the next few weeks could decide the fate of the proposed development of the Columbia River. Mr. Udall was quoted in a Vancouver newspaper on Nov. 22 as saying he was "confident" the federal government would permit the sale of B.C.'s down-stream benefit power from the Columbia River to the U.S. Pa-

Mr. Fulton has promised to spell out the federal stand at Prince George next Tuesday.

Also in Vancouver Wednesday, Attorney- General Robert Bonner explained why British Columbia believes there should be no federal objection to selling the downstream benefits.

In a speech to the American Marketing Association, he said that such a sale could not be considered export of power be cause the power involved would actually be produced in the United States through control of the Columbia's flow in Canada.

Ottawa has always maintained a strict anti-export policy on power.

Mr. Bonner said that if the downstream power were returned to B.C. it would pose an import, problem because B.C. couldn't use it all.

B.C.'s initial share of the downstream power, a b o ut 800,000 kilowatts, would arrive "overnight" as soon as the first two dams were built at two dams were built at the first two dams were built at the said that two dams were built at the first two dams were built at the first two dams were built at the said.
